What oleomargarine is to butter, the Democratic party is to the politics of the country.

Ben Hall is still able to let his tongue off in the Senate. Two operations wouldn't retire it.

The Senate adjourned late Saturday afternoon after a session of nineteen days including holidays.

Only a few days ago President Arthur told the Governor of Ohio that if there were any factions in the party he hoped all sides would confer with him; that so far as he was concerned he had no enemies to punish, and did not intend to be used to punish the enemies of other persons.

Congressman Williams has been invited by the Republican State Central committee to make several speeches this fall. In response to this request he has decided to make three speeches this week. At Monroe on Monday, 31, at Eau Claire on Tuesday, November 3d, and at Racine next Saturday.

The Garfield relic committee of Cleveland, is doing an immense business. Already over 7,000 applications have been received and the mails every day bring hundreds more. A large number of ladies have volunteered to help in the preparation of these relics, which consists of a bit of hanting or crapo with a flower. Of course nothing is charged for the relic, but a dollar or so enclosed in the letter for the Garfield monument fund will probably insure a very prompt response.

For many years Rock county has been the banner Republican county in this State. It has always given Republican majorities and nearly at every election these majorities have been larger than in any other Republican county in Wisconsin. Next Tuesday let the Republicans of Rock see to it that their laurels are not taken from them. A full vote will place the county in the front again and crown it with the honor it has so nobly won in the great political contests which have passed.

While there is not a great hurrah among the Republicans in the State, there is enough interest and enthusiasm in the party to draw out a good vote for an off year and to elect the Republican ticket by a handsome majority. An election of a Democratic State ticket, or placing the Legislature in the hands of the Democratic party, would be the severest blow the temperance cause could receive, and hence there are thousands of good temperance workers who will not contribute to the success of that party by voting the Prohibition ticket.

The ministers—or rather some of them—seem to have turned upon Colonel Watrous because he will not give the Prohibition ticket his support. It is not presuming too much to say that among the friends of the temperance movement in this State, there is not one who is more thoroughly in earnest and who has done more substantial good than Colonel Watrous. But he can't see that running a Prohibition ticket will help the temperance cause, and therefore he will not lend his influence to bolster up that ticket when the chief aim of the Prohibitionists is to put the Democratic party in power. The Sunday Telegraph, of which Colonel Watrous is one of the editors, says "George C. Haddock, of Milwaukee, says Mr. Watrous opposes the Prohibition ticket because he is jealous of Kanouse. Up to this year Mr. Kanouse and Mr. Watrous have united in opposing the Prohibition ticket, both doing so because they deemed the move unwise and damag, ag to the temperance cause. Both have been roundly abused by such creatures as Haddock, Stone, et al., because they would not join them in a raid to place the Democratic party in power. Mr. Kanouse has consented to aid in such an enterprise; Mr. Watrous has not, hence the outpouring of gall and fustichools from ministerial throats." It is very evident that Mr.

Kanouse was "fixed" by being nominated for Governor. Had he not been he would probably have been on the same platform with Colonel Watrous.

PRESIDENT CHAPIN AND THE TEMPERANCE TICKET.

On the 24th of October, President A. L. Chapin, of Beloit college, wrote a letter to a friend in Milwaukee on the temperance ticket, in which he said:

I exceedingly deprecate the starting of an independent temperance ticket for pending election in our State, as a measure, in my view, fraught only with mischief to both the cause of temperance and the political welfare of our commonwealth and our nation. Nearly every vote given for the Temperance ticket will be one taken from the Republican party, and will contribute, so far, to pass the rule of the State over to the Democratic party, which makes the drinking saloons its centres of influence, and which has been, through all its history, the determined opponent of all measures designed to restrict the sale and use of intoxicating liquors—to say nothing of its ruinous policy in other matters. They who have at heart the moral elevation of our people, and the sound administration of our public affairs, may well pause before assuming the risk of such consequences from a measure of such doubtful expediency.

President Chapin is a consistent and earnest friend of temperance reform. He is always ready to do that which will contribute to the success of the temperance movement, but he can not endorse the organization of the temperance party, nor give the Prohibition ticket any support. What he says in the letter given above is well worth reading, and well worth heeding.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS.

Our readers will remember that there are four amendments to the State constitution to be voted for at the coming election. They are all in relation to biennial sessions of the Legislature, and are as follows:

1. Providing for the election of members of the Assembly biennially and in single districts.
2. Providing for the election of Senators in single districts for four years.
3. Providing for biennial sessions of the Legislature.
4. Fixing the salaries of members of the Legislature at $500 for each regular session, and that no stationery, newspapers, postage or other perquisites shall be provided to members by the State.

These are the amendments which are proposed to the constitution and they are very important. The question of biennial sessions of the Legislature has been long discussed in Wisconsin, and this is the first time the matter directly before the people. There are thirty States out of thirty-eight, and all Territories, holding biennial sessions of their Legislatures, and the number of States adopting the biennial system is gradually increasing. Whether or no that system is better for Wisconsin than the annual can not be ascertained till it is tried. It is an experiment, of course, and those who desire to see biennial sessions tested will work and vote for the amendments. The Gazette has supported the proposition to submit this question to the people on the ground that there seemed to be a general desire among the voters to adopt biennial sessions; at least to give them a trial. The matter is now squarely before the people, and it is for them to decide whether or no the biennial system shall be practically adopted.

There is some dispute as to how the amendments shall be voted for—that is there is a conflict between the constitution of the State and the act which places these amendments before the people. It will be observed that the amendments effect different sections of the constitution, and the constitution provides that "if more than one amendment be submitted they shall be submitted in such manner that the people may vote for or against each amendment separately." But the law submitting these amendments provides that all four shall be voted for or against as a whole. Here is a conflict which is quite important, and to follow the constitution and vote for the amendments separately, would be fatal to the biennial system, as the four amendments must be adopted in order to make the biennial scheme perfect.

The Attorney General has given it as his opinion that all the amendments must be voted as a whole, "for" or "against." Under this construction the ballot will read, for those who favor the amendments, thus:

"For the amendment to section four, article four, of the constitution; for the amendment to section five article four of the constitution; for the amendment to section eleven, article four of the constitution; for the amendment to section twenty-one, article four of the constitution. Those who desire to vote against the amendments will use the same words except that the word "against" will be substituted for the word "for."

"Don't Know Half Their Value." They cured me of Ague, Biliousness and Kidney Complaint as recommended. I had a half bottle left, which I used for two little girls who the doctors and neighbors said could not be cured. I would have lost both of them one night if I had not given them Hop Bitters. They did them so much good, I continued their use until they were cured. That is why I say you do not know half the value of Hop Bitters, and do not recommend them high enough."—B. Rochester, N. Y. It is a foolish mistake to confound a remedy of merit with the quick medicines now so common. We have used Parker's Ginger Tonic with the happiest results for Rheumatism and dyspepsia, and when worn out by overwork, and know it to be a sterling health restorative.—Times. See adv.

PRESIDENT ARTHUR.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—The President will leave Washington for New York some time this week. How long, he will be absent is not known. He has considerable business to attend to before finally closing up his affairs in New York, and three or four days may be required to enable him to complete his arrangements for leaving the metropolis. It is expected that when the President returns from New York he will occupy the Executive Mansion.

STAR ROUTE CASES.

To be Called in the District Court To-day.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—The star route cases are to be called in the district court to-morrow on a motion to quash the information. Distinguished counsel on both sides will argue the question. As the time for the trial of these cases draws near some details are learned as to the programme of the defense. Every one of the persons indicted, and all of those against whom, according to rumor, it is proposed to bring indictments, are understood to confidently assert that the government will be unable to make out any case against them. Mr. Brady's line of defense in particular, it is said, will be to show that he not only was not guilty of any illegal acts, but that every extension of the postal service which he did order was ordered at the express instance and with the written approval of one or more members of Congress, army officers, cabinet officers, governors of States and Territories, leading merchants, and others. Mr. Brady, it is known, has preserved every one of these letters, and there is reason to think that there are few members of Congress whose letters will not be produced by him in defense of some of the general allegations to the star route service. It is claimed that, as to one of the routes where the expedition was noteworthy, he has the written recommendation of General Sherman, and even by Secretary Schurz. In the event of the failure of the prosecution for conspiracy, it is said to be the plan of Brady and others of the star-route people to proceed against Postmaster-General James and

Attorney-General MacVeagh for defamation of character, and in the course of these latter trials the attempt will be made to bring every newspaper editor and correspondent who has written about the star-route service into court, and to require them to show whether or not they obtained their information from Mr. James, MacVeagh, or some one connected with the postal service and the star-route prosecutions.

LIBEL SUIT.

Colonel Ingersoll Claims to Have Been Libeled.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—Colonel Ingersoll intends to institute suit for libel against the Philadelphia Inquirer. Some time ago, when defending some whisky men in Chicago, he had something to say about the effects of whisky. The passage in which he did this was an eloquent one, and was so good that it was appropriated by a temperance lecturer. The same lecturer took another passage from a preacher. The plagiarism upon Ingersoll was detected, and both his own and the preacher's paragraph are now being charged to him by the press. He has written 300 letters in a vain endeavor to set the matter right. Now this Philadelphia newspaper has made an attack upon Ingersoll which he deems libelous, as a part of this attack was stolen from the preacher and falsely attributed to Ingersoll.

PROMOTED.

Appointed General Superintendent of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul.

MILWAUKEE, October, 30.—To-night dispatches were received in the general office of the Chicago, Milwaukee, & St. Paul railway announcing that Hubbard C. Atkin, at present superintendent of the Chicago, La Crosse & Prairie du Chien divisions, has been promoted to the position of general superintendent, recently vacated by W. C. Van Horn. It is believed that Mr. Atkin will receive a salary equal to that of Mr. Van Horn—$10,000 per annum. It is authoritatively announced that Mr. Atkin will be succeeded as superintendent by Conductor James Tremaine for the Chicago division, and W. G. Collins for the La Crosse & Prairie du Chien division, and that the position of assistant superintendent will be abolished. The appointment leaves created a genuine sensation in railway circles here, and everybody expresses satisfaction at the promotions.

It flies on the wings of the morning, good news as well as bad, always. We mean the fame of "Dr. Sykes' Sure Cure for Catarrh."

ANOTHER FAST TRAIN.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—It is reported here that the New York Central railroad company will soon put on a fast train between New York and Chicago, to make the distance in twenty-four hours, two hours and thirty-five minutes ahead of the time for the fast train on the Pennsylvania road, which arrives on Monday. The fare on the fast train of the New York Central will be $9.25, but $5 will be charged for a sleeping car berth, making the total cost $14.25, against $22 on the Pennsylvania road.

And by every dealer in the land this remedy is sold. Sold by A. J. Roberts and Sherer & Co.

CIGAR-MAKERS.

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 30.—Cigar-makers numbering 1,500 men and boys, are about to strike for an advance, which will average about $1 per 1,000 cigars. A meeting was held to-day, and another will be held in Liederkranz hall to-morrow. The employers state that business will not warrant the payment of the advance demanded. The price of low grade tobacco has advanced fully 100 per cent, and of high grade, tobacco about 50 per cent, but this has not been taken into consideration, the returns on sales having been prompt up to the present time.

DISHONEST CONDUCTORS.

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 30.—A conspiracy among conductors and other employees of the Wisconsin Central railroad to plunder the company has been exposed. It is charged that conductors have been in the habit of retaining cash fares and selling unpurchased tickets to station agents. It is thought the stealing will amount to hundreds of thousands of dollars. A conductor named Stanley Cunningham was arrested in this city and another Gavin, in Menasha. It is said that the latter has made a confession which implicates a number of others. Eleven conductors were discharged about a week ago, and a number of station agents.

Sins of the Fathers Visited on the Children.

Physicians say that scrofulous taint cannot be eradicated, we deny it. "In toto." If you go through a thorough course of BURROCK BLOOD PURIFIER, your blood will get as pure as you can wish. Price $1.00, trial size 10 cents. Sold by A. J. Roberts and Sherer & Co.

ARREST OF FIREMEN.

DANVILLE, Ill., Oct. 30.—Six members of the fire department of the city were arraigned Saturday on charge of systematic incendiarism which destroyed $75,000 worth of property. One of the number, named Crandall, took the stand and exposed the whole conspiracy, acknowledging that he applied the torch to about fifty buildings, Marshal Myers found punk in one of the stables fired, and traced out the dealer, thus obtaining a clue which resulted in the shooting of Fireman Edward Peabody by a squad of police, who caught him in an attempt to fire a barn.

TOWN BURNED.

EDGEFIELD COURT HOUSE, S. C., Oct. 30.—The business part of the town was totally destroyed, only three stores being left. The large Tillman hotel was consumed. There are not provisions enough in town to last forty-eight hours. The office of one newspaper, the Chronicle, was burned. The Advertiser building and property are safe. The fire broke out just before dawn in the large livery stable of the Tillman hotel. The merchants and business men are terrible losers. The fire desolated everything from the Tillman Hotel to the Saluda House. The loss of property is immense. The stocks of goods generally were not insured. The fire raged all day and it was 5:40 p. m. before the flames had exhausted themselves. The scene was one of wild confusion and sadness. The loss is estimated at more than $200,000. The losses are distributed among thirty-five persons or firms. The heaviest individual loss is $38,000. The law office of United States Senator Butler is among the losses. The colored co-operation store and stock are gone. The fire is regarded as incendiary.

NIGHTFALL.

The hush of twilight, far and wide,
Falls on the green and sloping meadows;
The tremulous aspens stand,
By wayward currents of air,
Where the clear brooklet's mimic tide
Sweeps onward to the shadows.

All day its sun-drenched ripples flow
Through pastures strewn with hay and clover,
Through lonely glens where alders lean
To kiss the dimpled waters sweet,
And sweet wild roses blush and glow
The brambles droop and sigh.

By this low bridge and mossy stone,
In a soft mood its music thrills,
The daisies nod and the poppies nod,
And circling swallows overhead
More lightly, till each wavering honorable fair reflection staves.

Up the broad shoulders of the hills
Not twilight shadows creep and darken;
But on their faces, westward set,
A smile of sunset tranquility,
And there a throbbing pulse and thrills
The world below to harken!

Far off the cuckoo's plaintive call,
Seems separate from the silence, lingers;
In shadowland the blossoms sleep,
Where the night watch, earnestly,
Their nightly watch, earnestly,
With silent, drowsy fingers.

The stars peep forth, the afterglow
Fades slowly out behind the lakes;
The hush of twilight, far and wide,
To chirp a little in his dream—
When odorous breezes faintly blow
Adown the woodland arches.

The ripples vanish, seaward down,
The flowers in sleep their perfume render;
Scarcely round each darkening slope
The light is seen in the poppies,
That the rich harvest of the day
May rise in golden splendor!

HOW HE ESCAPED.

Martha Willis stood at the door of her father's log cabin on the banks of the Angelina River in Texas. She was gazing intently across the stream. The river was narrow, and the crossing was in the primitive style which prevails in some portions of the State—a rope, stretched tightly from bank to bank, and tied to convenient trees, by means of which a small raft, or "bateau," usually manned by two persons, was drawn back and forth.

This hot, drowsy, summer afternoon, Martha—a girl of sixteen years—thought the longest she had ever spent. The cattle stood panting in the stream near the shore. Not a breeze stirred the jungle of trees and bushes on the other side of the river, and the field around the house was a sun-baked waste. Would her father ever come?

He and the hired man had gone that morning to town for supplies, leaving her alone with Bobby, her little six-year-old brother—who at that moment was lying asleep on the floor in an inner room—and Eph, a little colored boy of ten, who had slipped into the woods to hunt squirrels.

Now Martha was not a Texas girl, and was not accustomed to these wild solitudes. Two years before, her father had decided to leave the State, and his fortunes on a Texas farm had been proposed to Martha to remain with his relatives in Virginia until he had a suitable home for her.

"You are not accustomed to roughing it," he said; "and life where I shall settle will be hard and lonely for years. It is a new place. Our nearest neighbor will be five miles away. I do not like to take you with me, and if you are wise you will stay with your aunt, who wants you very much."

"Then I'm not a bit wise," Martha said, with her bright face full of determination. "And I think my kind father is not quite wise in proposing such a thing to me. Why, who will attend to you and Bobby—a mere baby he is too! If you are sick, who will nurse you? I dare say, I'm the most helpful girl in the world, but do you really think I should be happy in shirking all my duties and staying in luxury, while you are undergoing all kinds of privation?"

So Martha had her own way, and being a bright, intelligent girl, had adapted herself to her new life with wonderful facility. Her neighbors were kind, good people, but they had little time to spare, and then they were so far off that frequent social calls were impossible.

But Martha interested herself in domestic duties. She raised poultry and made the best butter in the county. She had a good collection of books, and received some periodicals. She tried to keep up her studies; for she loved to read, and she was a student.

Circumstances allowed them again to mix in civilized society, it would not do for her to blush for her own ignorance. But this afternoon time hung heavy on her hands. Her father in going over the river had left the flat stretched on the other side, that it might be ready for him on his return. Vainly she strained her eyes through the thick undergrowth of the opposite bank, hoping to see him coming down the narrow path.

"It's been as long as ten days," she said, throwing herself down in a rocking-chair on the small porch. "I believe I'm getting tired of this lonely life. Day in and day out it's the same thing, and nothing happens one day excepting from any other day. And what father's return is a thousand times worse. I wouldn't care much what happened, were it only something out of the old routine. I'm getting like the old sluggish pond in the field, and I feel the green scum growing over me."

Her discontented eyes fixed themselves on the swampy forest before the cabin, and they did not move, even when she heard the gallop of a horse coming down the road.

"It's old Jake Potter coming to borrow a saw, or something; or one of those amiable Halton boys racing after a stray cow," she thought.

But not the horseman was neither Jake Potter nor a Halton boy. As he pulled up his horse before the cabin, Martha saw that he was a gentleman-looking young man of about twenty years of age, with a pale face, and a strange, wild look. He touched his hat to her in a mechanical manner.

"Can I get over the river here?" he asked.

"No, sir. We don't keep the public ferry," she answered. "That's more than five miles down the river."

He jumped from his horse, and came rapidly toward her. "If you'll only get the saw, I'll give you a good looking young man of about twenty years of age, with a pale face, and a strange, wild look. It's every cent I have, and it's a matter of life and death for me to get over immediately. For heaven's sake, help me, won't you?"

The tipsy tone, the look of agony in the young man's eyes, startled Martha. Was this a madman, before her, and she alone? And in his power? No, he did not look insane; though he kept turning and casting wild glances in the direction whence he had come.

"I am sorry, sir," she said, "but the flat was taken to the other side by my father, who has not yet returned. Look, you can see it from here."

"Then I shall have to swim the river," he said, turning from her.

"You must not!" she exclaimed earnestly. "The river is swollen by the last rains, and the tide is running like a mill-race! Not even a strong horse could swim it, and yours!"—looking at the tired little pony—"would not get half-way over."

"I'll swim it, absolutely for one moment, and then I'll swim it," he said.

"You look good and kind," he said; "and I'm sure you wouldn't harm me. I'll trust you. I am pursued by men who accuse me of a thing I never dreamed of doing. I am a perfect stranger—never was in this town in my life before last night—and the settlers take me for a member of some notorious horse-thief's gang. If they catch me, you know Texas justice—they'll hang me to the nearest tree, and try me after I'm dead. For the sake of all that's good, and more than all for my dear mother's sake, and a sob checked his words."

"Help an innocent stranger to escape!" Martha looked at him as he spoke. Like all self-reliant people, she formed her judgment of persons quickly and decidedly. No, he was not guilty, she was certain. But even had he been, for his youth, and his mother's sake, it is probable Martha would have done just as she did.

"I'll help you," she said. "No, you can't hide in the house, seeing his eyes turn to it. They are but two rooms, and no loft, and they'll be through them in no time. They'll search the barn and stable too. The woods back there are not safe, for of course they'll go over the whole ground if they track you here."

"I got away from them about noon," he said. "They were lying under the trees half drunk, and asleep, and I gave them the slip. My pony was tied in the woods, and I don't think they missed me until they waked up. But of course they'll track me here, or near here. I must lose no time."

Martha thought for a few minutes. "I can think of but one plan," she said. "You must disguise yourself. I have the dress of a German woman who has been at work for me for a short time. She was about your height and size. Here it is," taking a dress from a shelf.

"Go into the house and put it on, and I will turn your pony loose in the woods. In an hour or two he will be far enough from here."

When she returned, the young man was turned into a tall, awkward woman. Martha added to his toilet a large handkerchief pinned across the breast, and a German sun-bonnet which shaded his face completely.

"Any one would take you for Bertha," she said, surveying him critically. "She don't speak a word of English, so you needn't open your lips; and she wore her sun-bonnet even at meals. Oh, I forgot your boots. Here, put on this pair of father's old shoes."

"Don't you hear horses galloping?" cried the youth, his face glowing gaily.

Martha listened. Yes, there was no doubt of it. Horsemen were coming rapidly down the road. The young man was trembling in every limb.

"It's not that I'm afraid of death," he said; "I'm not a coward; but such a shame, and just do!"

"Your nervousness will betray you. Here, take this rake, and scrape up the dead leaves in the yard. No one will notice them that you tremble so. And—look here, when the men come into the yard, don't go on with your work with your face turned away. That will be the suspicious. Just put your two hands on the rake, and rest your chin on them, and look boldly at the people. In that sun-bonnet no one can easily tell whether you're white or black."

He obeyed submissively, but Martha, glancing furtively at him as four or five men rode into the yard, saw the hands folded over the top of the rake shaking. The leader of the party, a short, stout, elderly man, she had a slight acquaintance with.

"Good-afternoon, Miss Willis," he drawled. "Well, now, has a young fellow on a dun pony crossed the river this afternoon?"

"Martha was delighted that the question took this form.

"No, Colonel Gardner; no one has crossed the river, because, as you see, my father took the flat to the other side, and there it is now. He went to Cross-town this morning, and hasn't come back yet."

"Well, let's reconnoiter, boys; maybe he'll be to swim it. You Johnson, stay here till I come back."

In a short time he was back again with the rest of the party.

"No signs," he drawled. "We lost the track in that thickets, and certain sure he ain't there."

"You boys and the folks will come up with him I reckon," said one of the men. "You told me to meet us here, didn't you, Curnell?"

"Yes," and to Martha's dismay the whole party, dismounting from their horses, secured them to the paling, and leisurely marched to the house Indian file.

"You needn't be uneasy, Miss Willis," said the leader. "Jiss give us cheers out here under the trees, and we'll get here, and admire the prospect."

Jim Pendleton rode here to get father's say-so.

"Well, we'll sarch—meanin' no offense, my dear"—and the Colonel waddled into the house, while the men scattered into the outbuildings. Nerved on by the emergency, Martha strove to go on quietly with a piece of work she had hastily caught up. In a few minutes they returned, the Colonel puffing and blowing, and fanning himself with his hat. He sank into a seat near her.

"I'm sorry your pa wasn't here," he said; "but I hope, my dear, you ain't scared. My girls don't scare worth a cent, but you're a stranger, and puny to boot, and you're not used to our ways. You see, in Texas, we don't 'low criminals to git away."

"Aint that woman a master hand to work?" looking curiously at the looker. "Aint she that German woman your pa hired last week?"

Martha had not time to reply before Robbie, his nap over, ran out on the porch.

"Why, if there aint Bortan!" he cried, spying the well-known dress and sun-bonnet, and was running out to join her, when his sister caught him.

"You're goin' to disturb Bortan till she finishes her work, Robbie. If you do, I'll punish you."

Rob looked up in astonishment at his sister's angry tone, but Colonel Gardner laughed approvingly.

"You'll do to tie to, young miss! That's the sort I like. You git all the work out of your hired people, and you don't let 'em shirk it. Halloo, if here aint Job Lyons!" as another wild-looking horseman dashed up to the gate. "Got him, Job?"

"No, Curnell, but we've got your hosses. They was a-grazin' near Boggy Creek. You brought us, Curnell, on a wild-goose chase, far them hosses aint bin stole. Just slipped their halters and got away. I'm off to my work," and he galloped away.

Delight and dismay chased each other over the Colonel's broad face.

"Wall, now, gentlemen," he said deprecatingly to the men who had risen and were preparing to move off, "I'm mighty sorry I troubled you."

"You might have got us in a heap worse trouble of we had broken that younger's neck, as you and Johnson wanted," said one of the men sternly. "We ought to thank our stars he got away."

"Wall, now," said the Colonel, helplessly, "we've bin chasin' a fellow for nothin', eh?"

"Looks monstrous like it," said the man who had just spoken; "and we were within an ace of hangin' him to the first convenient limb, for nothin'!"

Too, look here, Curnell, you don't git me out agin when your hosses git away."

They rode off, leaving the crest-fallen Colonel to follow at his leisure.

As he rolled his portly bulk to the gate, Martha heard him muttering:

"Wall, now, how in thunder did them hosses break loose?"

It was over—the fear and suspense. Martha had never fainted in her life, but she felt faint, and sick, and closed her eyes for a few minutes. When she opened them, the young man had taken off his disguise and was in his own clothes, and looking at her gratefully.

"I can't thank you," he said. "You've done so much for me that I can't express myself. But for you I should have been hanging to one of those trees. They wouldn't have given me ten minutes."

"You're safe now," she said. "You're But I wouldn't have showed myself even when I heard of it, because it might have injured you with your neighbors—for assisting a supposed horse-thief. My name is Burton—Harry Burton; and my mother will thank you some day for this."

"Why did you leave home to wander around in this way?" Martha asked curiously.

Harry Burton looked a little confused, but said:

"Well, the fact is, I thought I'd see a little of the world. To tell the truth, I've been away from home two months, and had written my mother that I was coming back to look after matters on the farm again, when all this happened to me. I will go and look for my horse now, and perhaps, when your father returns, he will set me across the river. I'm going to ride all night, for I'm just wild to see home again."

Martha directed him to the place where his pony had been turned loose, and then sat down to think quietly.

What an afternoon it had been! And all these things had happened in a few hours. Robbie was looking every-

Mothers! Mothers!! Mothers!!!

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the excruciating pain of cutting teeth? If so, go at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately—depend upon it; there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother on earth who has ever used it, who will not tell you at once that it will regulate the bowels, and give rest to the mother, and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe to use in all cases, and pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Hasseltou guarding the rear, he quickly unlocked the door, when lo—a dog, with whining voice and wagging tail, came prancing toward him, evidently overjoyed at seeing a human face. The dog had been attending the convention last Saturday, and got left. He was given a square meal to stone for his forty hours' fast, and went off rejoicing to find his master.

—It is "Captain" Webster now, and Frank's many friends here will read with interest the following from the Ripon Commonwealth concerning the organization of another company of young braves: "The Ripon Guards had a meeting Tuesday evening in Greenway's hall; fully seventy-five young men signed the muster roll. The following officers were elected: Captain, Frank Webster; First Lieutenant, Emmons Follett; Second Lieutenant, William J. Starr; Sergeant, Henry Wolcott; and Charles Davies for Secretary in place of Emmons Follett resigned. The company are very happy in their selection of Captain, as Mr. Webster has been a member of the Janesville Guards, the best drilled company in the State, and was one of their best drilled members. The boys are bound to make it a success. They have taken preliminary steps to obtain arms from the State."

THE CHURCH FOLK OBJECT.

Rev. Henry Colman, D. D., the presiding elder of the Milwaukee district of the Methodist conference, has telegraphed to the pastors of the Methodist churches of this city, that he will be here to deliver a lecture next Thursday evening on temperance, and intimating that he expected them to make the necessary arrangements. Rev. O. A. Curtis gave publicity to the telegram at the service at Court street church last evening, and while he spoke in favor of all efforts to promote temperance, yet he had not yet become converted to faith in the present move of the prohibition party. He did not deem the action of the annual conference at Whitewater, favoring the prohibition ticket, as binding upon the church, and while he would be glad to hear Dr. Colman talk on temperance, he could not favor giving up the regular Thursday evening meeting, and throwing open the church for a political meeting.

At the First Methodist church Rev. Mr. Holmes also announced that Rev. Dr. Colman would speak here Thursday night, and that the place would probably be announced in the papers. He did not feel warranted in giving up the Thursday evening prayer meeting, or changing it to Wednesday night without authority.

The telegram has caused some little stir among the Methodist members. Despite the action of the conference, many do not consider that the time has come, or ever will come, when the Methodist church is to be used as a handy political organization, and some are quite annoyed at the intimation that a presiding elder in the church expects to use the organization as an easy way to arrange for campaign speeches and mass meetings in a State election, and not a few there are, even among those who are not very constant attendants upon prayer-meetings, who object to the request of a presiding elder to give up a prayer-meeting for a political one.

Rev. Dr. Colman has many friends and acquaintances here, who would be glad to hear him talk on temperance, but who do not enjoy the idea of his using his presiding-eldership for political purposes. If the Methodist church organization is to be used by him for the prohibition party, it should, to be fair and consistent, be also used by his brother, Elihu Colman, who is an equally strong Methodist, and temperance man, and who is now giving Republican speeches, and finds no difficulty in securing audiences without the aid of the church.

KILLED WHILE HUNTING.

Yesterday afternoon Mr. Alpetter and a young man who works for him, were hunting at Lake Koshkonong, when by some accident Alpetter's gun was discharged, the shot taking effect in his companion's back, causing an injury which led to a speedy death. The deceased lived at Fort Atkinson, and his father came after his body this morning, intending to take it there for interment. No further particulars have yet been received.

DENIED IT.

To whom it may concern, It having been reported, as I am informed, that I have stated that John W. Hogan, Marshal of the city of Janesville, took five dollars in money from me unjustly and without any right, I hereby deny that said City Marshal ever took five dollars from me or any other sum of money unjustly or that he ever took any money from me at all.

THE DEMOCRATS.

Their Delays at the Saturday Night Caucus and the Convention to-day. The Democrats met Saturday evening at Washington Engine house to choose delegates to the Assembly convention held to-day. A. O. Wilson called the gathering to order. A. D. Wickham was chosen chairman and George G. Sutherland Secretary.

The following delegates were chosen, and authorized to appoint substitutes, or cast a full vote.

First Ward—G. G. Sutherland, J. F. Ehrlinger, D. Davies, D. Downing and John E. Bauman.

Second Ward—Edward Connell, Wm. Cox, J. J. R. Pense, John Spence and Albert Bender.

Third Ward—James Church, J. M. Burgess, M. C. Smith, J. B. Whiting and E. B. McKee.

Fourth Ward—O. P. Robinson, Clarence L. Clark, C. O. McLean, John Lawler and P. J. Laaritz.

Fifth Ward—T. B. Leakey, Wm. M. Knoff, A. O. Wilson, Wm. Hemming and J. B. Fitzgibbon.

At the convention this afternoon Hon. J. J. R. Pense called the gathering to order and on his motion Dr. J. B. Whiting was chosen chairman, and G. G. Sutherland secretary.

The chairman named as a committee on credentials, C. L. Clark, H. W. Cator, and D. Downing.

The committee reported the names of the delegates chosen Saturday evening, and H. W. Cator and J. A. Blount as delegates from the town of Janesville.

The temporary officers were made permanent, and on being called on for a speech Dr. Whiting made an earnest and brief address, laudatory of the party.

Dr. Robinson in a neat little speech introduced the name of John Winans, and moved that he be declared the nominee of the convention by acclamation. This motion was carried unanimously.

D. Davies, Dr. Robinson and T. T. Croft, were appointed to wait upon Mr. Winans and inform him of the action.

In the interim, on motion of A. O. Wilson, an assembly district committee was appointed: J. A. Blount, chairman, C. Sexton, Ed. Connell, E. B. McKee, C. L. Clark, J. B. Fitzgibbon, H. W. Cator, George Blunk.

The committee returning reported that Mr. Winans was busy in court, and could not appear in person, but sent his thanks and acceptance.

On the suggestion of the chairman three cheers were given for the nominee, and adjournment was taken.

PERSONAL.

—J. G. Hayner is on the sick list.

—James McDermott, who is pursuing a course of medical study in Chicago, is here for a day's stay.

—Mrs. Wm. Stevens, of Winona, Minn., mother of the late Mrs. Joe Doe, is visiting at Mrs. Thomas Lappin's.

—Clara Louise Kellogg has some old school-mates in Janesville. Mrs. R. W. Burton was well acquainted with her when in her girlhood she attended school at Birmingham, N. Y. Mrs. Van Sicken was also at one time a school-mate of Miss Kellogg's.

—Mrs. Watson has received from her son Will, who is in New Mexico, a trunk filled with curiosities gathered by him there. Among them is a cactus, which is as large around as a half-bushel measure, and is almost as solid as rock. It is unlike any cactus seen in this part of the country. Will also sends home a cactus cane for his father, which is a decidedly unique walking stick. He also sends a large number of birds' nests, eggs, etc., which are very curious. In fact the trunk is a museum of itself, and contains many articles of great interest.

—It will be of interest to all of our citizens to learn that President Arthur was at one time in Janesville, and that he thought of remaining here as a permanent resident, but circumstances changed his plans. While at Yorktown the President told Governor Smith, that he came to Janesville in 1857, and remained here for a few weeks, intending to enter upon the practice of law here. During this brief stay he became acquainted with many of our citizens, including Isaac Woodie, Charles Jordan, Judge Armstrong, A. Hyatt Smith and others, and he had many questions to ask the Governor about the whereabouts of many Janesville and Wisconsin men.

—George W. Peck, whose shining light is rightly called "The Sun," beamed upon us this morning, being just on his way home from Lake Koshkonong where he has been shooting ducks, or rather shooting at ducks. Of course he put in yesterday in rest and in worshipping nature, and as is so often the case, Sunday was about the only day when there was any chance to get ducks, so he came back empty handed. Peck was honest enough to own up, too, that he hadn't shot any ducks. He has evidently reformed, or else he has become so well satisfied with the record that he has made on duck-shooting stories, that he has concluded to quit, and let the old score stand. It matters little whether Peck comes here empty-handed or with a full hand, he is always welcome, and he gets the shake from all in a very hearty kind of a way.
